Ice a “scourge on Australian society”

Parliamentary secretary for health, Christopher Pike, recently labeled “ice” - the crystalline form of methamphetamine - “a scourge on Australian society”. NSW Premier, Morris Iemma agrees and recently announced that the State will host a national summit to discuss the problem. Ice is a growing concern as it is not only highly addictive but it can also lead to long-term psychiatric problems. For more information about illicit drugs, including methamphetamines, download the free feature article, Illicit drug use in Australia.
